So many of these foreign dukes who come to America fortune-hunting are so contemptibly rotten that the devil would duck up an alley to keep from meeting them.

God's doing all he can to block your way to hell.

You know the devil nothing but uncompromising hatred and enmity. I guess he gets all that's coming to him from me all right.

Jesus Christ was no dough-faced mutt. When he got going Jesus could go so fast that you couldn't see him for the dust.

Jesus Christ broke up every funeral he ever attended. He did it by giving life to the dead.

I'd rather be twin old maids than married to some cussing blatant godless blaspheming old lobster like that thing you call husband.

At an auction sale a good many of you husbands would sell three bunches for a nickel.

You can't look up a runt, in mind and body, unless you happen to be married to him, and then you do it under protest.

A fellow will drill a tunnel through a mountain of opposition to get his best girl.

If you have been drilling away at the same old hole for forty years with little success, you are in the wrong hole or your drill is too short.

A good many of you are like the fellow that went to the Doctor. Doc told him to put out his tongue and he said 'Look at my wife's tongue; that's what's the matter with me.'

There is no more hope for the fool than for the fellow who thinks he knows it all.

You forget that God is your prosperity.

You say: I'll see you later, God.

But you can't pull the wool over God's eyes.

Some people expect nothing when they pray and are not disappointed.

Get down on your knees and pray as if you expect your prayers to be answered.

Ladies and gentlemen, if I cannot live what I preach I will leave the platform and never go back on it.

If you will do away with crime you will reduce poverty to a minimum. If the deeds of men were black the hearts of men were black before the deeds of men were black.

God will listen to the man in the mill as attentively as to the president. God never ducked his hat to anyone.

You might as well try to pull a locomotive up grade with a string as to try to get some people on their knees.

SAVING OF ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS

road with a prancing step. The old horse by his side starts off with slow but steady gait, and he brings up his end of the doubletree with a gentle pull but with a determination that it be kept up until the day's work is done. The colt and the old horse may come home together in the evening but the old horse will be pulling the load and the colt will be lagging back and the singletrees striking his heels at every step.

It's fun to start something. It's fun to plan and talk and to work out imaginations before we come to the hill. When there are no ruts in the roads, no loads to tighten our tugs or bruise our breasts, and while the sky is clear and the air fresh and balmy it is frolic for the colt: We love to run things until we strike the hill. Then we balk. When it requires effort, and work, and prayer and sacrifice, most of us heave up on the backstraps and loosen our tugs. We not only refuse to pull but we lay down and double the load for the old horse by our side. If heaven is at the top of the hill a great many of us will never get there unless the old horse pulls us all the way up. But the old horses can't do all the work. The colts must at least stand up and walk. They can help a little, and every little helps. A word, a smile, a song may light the torch that will lead some wayfarer home. The man or woman who balks at the hill is as useless as a colt, but the man or woman who bends to the task like the trusty faithful old horse, is the power that moves the load and climbs the heights.

Flashes With Billy Sunday

Many times recently I have referred to the fact that I am an old-fashioned fellow, and find it hard sometimes to adapt myself to modern ways. As another example I have been reading in my old home paper, which was published back at Danville, Ill., of the methods of one Billy Sunday, revivalist, who is turning the old town upside down with a revival meeting, and who has up to date gotten over a thousand conversions. They are certainly widely different from all traditional ways, but since they seem to bring the results, what does it matter? He hits a clear note once in a while, and I am minded to quote a few of them as outlining his mental position. His sermons as a whole would not appeal to me, but that is also an unimportant matter. Here are a few of his remarks:

A great step has been taken when you call sins and crimes by their right names.

You can no more get away from your truth than a waxlegged dog could catch an asbestos rabbit in hell.

Strap the devil in the death chain and turn on the full current.

I like to see the women who have plenty of time and money and rich husbands to take care of them, get out and do something for the girl who has to brush up against the world to earn her bread and butter.

Good resolutions won't keep you out to hell unless you put them into action.

If you are in a business which God is not in, get out of it, or it may be a millstone about your neck to drag you into hell.

It's not easy to give up some of the things that are in your life; neither is it easy to go to the hospital and let the physician cut off your arm or leg, but when it's necessary to save your life, you'll be glad to go.

No man can ruin a trusting woman without dispiriting himself for it.

I don't say that there are no sincere death-bed repentances, but they are few and uncertain at best.

Repentance isn't feeling sorry. When I was a kid I always felt sorry for what I had done when I saw my mother getting a switch.

When an elephant sees his ugly image in clear water he becomes violently angry and lashes the water into foam. There must be a good deal of human nature about an elephant.

You can't scare people into repentance any more than you can drive the poison out of a rattlesnake by putting a clothes pin on its tail.

When you are bound to mind your parents so long as they tell you to do right, but you don't have to mind anybody on earth when they tell you to do what is wrong.

If every boy and every girl had a good mother, the saloons would go out of business tomorrow.

The day is coming when parents are going to refuse to send their children to college because they are filled up by two-by-four infidel professors.

A kiss will cure all the ills of life. God never looked upon a sadder pic-mitted robbery. Were any gov-to adopt the Soto act upon its ten-men would cease to be a man ould not be free to choose his own tupation; he would not be free to choose his own district; most probably he would not be free to choose his own wife or to rear his own family, or to dispose of his own time, or to improve his own position, or to enter upon any of those spheres of action and enterprise which develop talent and build up character. Instead of being a free-born Englishman, he would become a slave-born tool of the State. Like Messina in the late earthquake, the state itself would, under the Socialists totter and fall into disaster and ruin.

It is the duty of every true lover of his country and of his religion to denounce Socialistic tendencies as the menace to his home, to his country, and to his church. Socialism meant the utter overthrow of freedom, of patriotism, of religion. Unless they were quick to crush it out of existence, before long it would fatally crush them beneath its Juggernaut wheels of tyranny.

THE UNWRITTEN LAW HERO.

Nowadays, we suppose, Othello would have reasoned it out about as follows:
"The way my wife and that Cassio are carrying on humiliates me exceedingly. If my friends found it out they would secretly jeer at me, which my sense of honor could not endure. Therefore, I will take steps which insure that the newspapers all over the country shall publish columns about the case, dragging out every little circumstance which can possibly reflect upon Mrs. Othello or myself. They will print her picture and mine and the children's across the front page. At every saloon and corner grocery of the land men will be law-hawing with zest over intimate details that make her appear in the most shameful light—published on the same page with virtuous denun-ciations of some immoral play or novel." Thus my self-respect will be restored, my sense of honor made whole, and the jury will sympathetically acquit me as a chivalrous defender of the home which I have publicly dragged through the gutter and made a by-word from coast to coast."

These reflections are applicable to all our delectable unwritten-law heroes.
There are certain domestic misfortunes which persons of a retiring disposition would wish to have discussed as little as possible; while others—perhaps of a more chivalrous and sensitive nature insist upon getting them on the front page under search-heads.—Saturday Evening Post.

PACKERS MEAT CONDEMNED

The News has watched with a good deal of pleasure the results of the local inspection of meats that have been brought to this market. The institution of this office we consider along with school and sanitary legislation, among those of the greatest importance enacted by the present council. Dr. Kaslovitz, the city inspector of meats and milk has been active in the performance of his duty, and his work certainly deserves the commendation of the people of this city. His is capable, there is no doubt about that part of it. He has protected both the milk and meat dealers of the city and the consumer.
His duties at times are as hazardous as those of a country editor, but he has stood the fire like a soldier and is meeting the requirements. This week he tested and condemned seven hundred pounds of pork loin, beef and mutton for the Cudahy's and two hundred pounds for the Swift Packing Company. Yesterday the editor of the News went with him to the Glenrock Cafe where he examined a shipment of stuff that among it was a quantity of hog's brains that were condemned.
These people invite the inspection of their stuff and are grateful to the inspector for his services to enable them to offer clean and pure food to their customers. And the News wants to say right here that this place is one of the best kept and cleanest we have had the pleasure of visiting. The kitchen of the Glenrock is at this time well kept.
There can be no better advertisement than that for a restaurant business. The News is informed by Dr. Kaslovitz that the eating houses and restaurants of this city are now being tidily kept and that they are all furnishing the public with stuff that is clean and wholesome in both milk and meats.
In his work he has had the heartiest support of the city government and the people, and our butchers, instead of trying to hinder his work are in hearty cooperation with it, and realize that the protection it affords them is of the greatest importance. There is no question but that Tucumcari is becoming thoroughly civilized.

J. A. Street, to the people who have supported him, and who are today stronger than ever in their approval of his official career in this city, appears greater in his defeat than he would have in victory. As to the cause of his defeat of course, we understand it was not that you loved Caesar less, But Rome more. There is one thing that just as well be remembered, and that is that those who stood by him in his race for the vindication of his official life as mayor of this city, will stand his firm defenders and supporters in the beneficient service he has rendered this community as long as he and they shall reside here. So far as this paper is concerned, in the support we have given him, if it has in any manner detracted from the commendation that he so justly deserved, we are truly sorry; otherwise, we have no apology to make or favors to ask.

The best constructed sewer system in the Southwest is what we are given credit for having finished here this week. This is a fact, notwithstanding that some of our patriotic citizens! say Dalhart has a better one for a cost of $40,000. The tests now underway are meeting the requirements to a punctuation. The system will be ready to tie onto in a few days, then the plumber will have an inning and some more money will be spent among the laborers and business men of the city.
These improvements have been a great help to the boys who needed work as well as to the business people of the city, and there is not a man, woman or child in the community who will not be benefitted by the system in the future as long as they live here. This comes through the advantages of sanitation, convenience and cleanliness. We are all for sewerage now and should be grateful to the city administration that brought it about.

Father Bernard Vaughan, speaking in London recently, warned his hearers against the plausible but fatal doctrine which defied the state, while it made man a slave. The state existed for man, and not man for state. Were the State to usurp Socialistic dominion over man, it would become nothing better than a bully, a tyrant, the worst of slave-drivers. The function of the state was not to appropriate, but to protect the rights of the individual. When it usurped an authority to which in equi-
